ABSTRACT

Purpose of the study: This study aims to analyze the development of philosophical thoughts and its influence on the world order from the perspective of Civilization Communication

Methodology: This study used a literature study approach by analyzing the development of philosophical thoughts during the Ancient Roman era, philosophy during the Islamic period, and the philosophy of Western countries and their relation to the order of world civilization, in the perspective of Civilization Communication.

Principal Findings: This study found that in the perspective of Civilization Communication, philosophical thoughts were developed and used as a reference in a certain period would affect the order of life in the development of knowledge and dialectics of thought, values, and norms in society, and the development of human civilization. A nation adopted philosophical thoughts, a country, and the world, would provide justification and judgment on something: right or wrong, allowed or not, worthy or rejected, especially on the justification for the path taken and the results achieved, as well as the usefulness for the community and the earth. History has proven that a nation's civilization at a particular time would arise and sink, replaced by other civilizations. Ibn Khaldun said that this happened naturally. Meanwhile, in another opinion, it was stated that a nation's civilization would be destroyed if the majority did not give allegiance to the creative elite, and the pattern of social unity was divided. The Civilization Communication Perspective found that one of the things that would shape the world order is philosophical thought and religious teachings.
